Intern of the Month

This summer, Rachel Rowlands participated in an internship at the University of Rochester's Department of Chemistry under the supervision of Dr. Melanie Bordeaux. She discovered this internship through the Chemistry Club, and spent her summer working on the growth, expression, and purification for P450 enzymes.

As an intern, Rachel found her passion for lab work through her work with protein synthesis, protein modification and how proteins can be used in drug synthesis. She found it very interesting to learn the biochemistry of proteins and even had the chance to work on anticancer drug synthesis.

Rachel will be graduating in 2015, and thanks to her internship, she intends on looking into furthering her education to get a MD or PhD in Medicinal Chemistry.
